Aspiring Music Business Professional

Pursuing a career in the music industry, Olivia Schnur has acquired a diverse range of skills through her education and professional experience. Currently a senior at Boston University, she is earning a bachelor's degree in advertising with a minor in business. Her university experience includes interning at music-focused companies in Los Angeles and Boston, rigorous coursework, and various roles in college radio.

Last spring, Schnur completed Boston University's entertainment business program in Los Angeles, where she worked for 100 Management, a management and music publishing company. As a publishing administration intern, she updated catalogs of signed songwriters, assisted with branding of 100 Management's website, and contributed to A&R scouting.

Since mid-2024, Schnur has interned for Candlepin Records, assisting with administrative duties, artist booking, and recommendations for the roster. She has also worked in the restaurant industry and volunteered for the Alliance for Positive Change during her summers.

At Boston University, Schnur studied intellectual property law, music business, advertising, and creative development. Alongside her coursework, she joined the college radio in her sophomore year. In the club, she held the position of community outreach deputy and is the showrunner for a program that spotlights small, local artists.
